

Jody Powers' Bio
AMELIA'S CLOSET

Jody Powers began her 28-year graphic design career soon after moving to Murfreesboro, TN in 1986. During that time, she also taught high school photojournalism and coached fastpitch softball, winning four state championships.

Jody resigned from her eighteen-year graphics job and eleven-season head coaching job in 2014. She felt called to start Amelia's Closet after being burdened to make a bigger difference in her world by filling an unmet need, first observed at her church.

Having grown up a painfully shy and insecure tomboy, Jody often felt like an outsider resulting from her military family's frequent cross-country moves. This feeling fueled her sensitivity to help other people feel accepted, significant, and to know their purpose.

Jody is also passionate about "before-and-afters," making lists, and exemplifying a comfort-zone defector. She's been married to Joel for twenty-eight and a half years, and they have two grown children and two granddaughters.
